Dalia Marcinkeviciene
Chair, Women’s Studies Department and Lecturer in History, Vilnius University

Thursday, April 23, 2009
12:00 – 1:30 p.m.
Encina Hall E008
Ground Floor Conference Room
Stanford University

There are some peculiarities in conducting interviews about the Soviet past in post-Soviet space. What details of everyday life do interviewees reveal? And how do life stories shaped during Soviet times, but recalled and reconsidered in the post-communist era influence the interview?

Professor Dalia Marcinkeviciene is chair of the Women’s Studies Center, and a lecturer in History Department at Vilnius University. Her research interests include Lithuanian family history during the period 1795-1990; theories in Sovietology. Marcinkeviciene was awarded Fulbright (2002-2003) and AAUW (2005-2006) research fellowships. She is an author and editor of three books (published in Lithuanian): Famous Lithuanian Women, the 19th – the Beginning of the 20th Century. Vilnius University Press, 1997; The Society of Married People: Marriage and Divorce in Lithuania, the 19th – the Beginning of the 20th Century. Lithuanian Institute of History, 1999; Life Stories of Lithuanian Women. Vilnius University Press, 2007.

Lunch provided. Please RSVP: http://fce.stanford.edu/events/registration/5698/

Sponsored by the Forum on Contemporary Europe.